Text 1

Cheryl and Chris - celeb couple, parents of two, and professional 'Fun People' -	1
have just forked out $14 million for a beachside Malibu mansion and Radar	2
Online got a sneak preview.	3
Here are six things you never thought you needed to know about someone	4 else's house, but can't deny you're vaguely interested in. Let's face it, we all	5
like being nosey.	6
1. It has four bedrooms and three bathrooms and is gated. Yes, GATED. It has	7
gates. No wandering into Cheryl's kitchen and demanding quinoa cakes with	8
mung beans, then.	9
2. It's on Malibu's most coveted beach, Little Dume, and has a private bit for	10 anchoring a yacht. They don't have a yacht but they'll obviously get one	11 because otherwise it'd be such a massive waste. Someone could be using that	12
yacht docking space, guys. Selfish.	13
3. There's a tennis court surrounded by loads of bushes so people can't take	14
pictures of Chris's backhand. Maybe he plays tennis like a toddler? We'll never	15
know.	16
4. On top of this cute little beach house, the pair own a massive estate in	17
London, a place in New York City and, in 2012, they spent about $10 million for	18
an equestrian estate in Los Angeles.	19
5. It have heated floors to protect them against the frankly arctic Malibu	20
conditions.	21
6. Chris was, according to Radar Online, really sad when they moved to LA to	22
be closer to, erm, Cheryl's friends and family - but it looks like he's making an	23 effort to properly settle down here. They've already had a desiner in to do	24
the whole house up before the move.	25
Do you feel better now that you know all about their new house. Will you sleep	26
tonight, thanks to this insight into Cheryl's heated flooring and Chris's tennis	27 court? Good. Next up: six things you never knew about Britney Spears's	28
welcome mat.	29

Text 2

Has cycling become more dangerous?

It depends what you mean by dangerous. The most authoritative data on cycling safety and accidents is provided by the Department for Transport (DfT). According to the latest figures, during 2012 in the UK:

- 118 cyclists were killed (one every three days)
- 3,222 were seriously injured (almost nine a day)
- 15,751 were slightly injured (43 a day)

These figures are based on incidents reported to the police, so the true figure for cyclists being slightly injured is likely to be much higher.

Serious injuries are defined as an injury resulting in prolonged hospitalisation and/or significant disability. The key measure used by experts to judge cycle safety is "killed or seriously injured", which is sometimes shortened to KSI.

Are women more at risk of an accident?

Several newspaper reports have focused on deaths involving young female cyclists. These incidents are shocking and may have led to a perception that female cyclists are more likely to be involved in a collision. In fact, men and boys are far more likely to be involved in a KSI incident than women and girls.

While it is true that male cyclists significantly outnumber female cyclists in the UK, males are still over-represented in the KSI statistics. Even when taking this imbalance into account, it is estimated that males are 1.4 times more likely to be killed and 1.7 times more likely to be seriously injured than females.

Psychological research suggest that, generally, men take more risks than women. For example, a 2013 Dutch study found that male cyclists were less likely to have lights fitted to their bikes and more likely to run red lights at train crossings than female cyclists.
