Kate - Hello, Jessie. Did you have a nice weekend?
Jessie - Hi Kate. Yes, thank you. In fact it was great. You will never guess who I saw on Saturday!
K - No, probably not but I have a feeling that you're going to tell me.
J - Well, as you know, we went to see Hamlet at the Civic Theatre. And guess who was sitting right in front of me?
K - Well, who?
J - Only one of the greatest pop stars ever! Lady Gaga! K - No way! Are you sure it was her?
J - Positive. I started to follow her after the play to get an autograph but Mike stopped me. He said it wasn't right.
K - Yeah, I guess so. I think he was right. What about the play. Did you enjoy it?
J - Yes, I think. Well, I couldn't really focus on the play with her sitting in front of me! K -Who?
J - Lady Gaga, of course. But after the show we went for a nice meal to that French restaurant, round the corner. The food was fabulous. I recommend it. And it's quite reasonable as well.
K - Ok, I might try it this weekend.

- In the studio today our guest is Gemma whose mother was diagnosed with terminal lung cancer a year ago. Now Gemma says it's time to fight back. Gemma, why is Stand Up to Cancer so important to you and your mum?

- It's so important to raise funds to allow more research, trial drugs and improve people's quality of life. These improvements mean my mum has a much better chance to receive treatment than my grandma had when she was diagnosed ten years ago. Sadly, she passed away a few years ago. We need to detect and treat cancer sooner, so we can win the fight.

- How do you and your mum Stand Up to cancer?

- This campaign has given my mum the positivity to keep fighting and the messages of support we've received have been overwhelming, so we will be taking part in the sponsored night-time walk on 11th October in Liverpool. We're staying as positive as possible so we can lead normal lives. We go out for meals, take the dogs for walks and enjoy shopping together, of course!

- Gemma, it was a pleasure talking to you. Many thanks.

Good evening. This is the 10th of November and we have a special weather report for the UK. Stormy conditions will hit parts of the UK on Monday morning, with strong winds and heavy rain expected to spread westwards bringing the risk of travel disruption and flooding. The Met Office has issued severe weather warnings for rain and wind.

Some areas in Wales, north-west England, eastern parts of Northern Ireland and western and northern parts of Scotland could see gusts of up to 70mph. Winds could reach speeds of 60mph in south-west England.

The Police Service of Northern Ireland warned motorists to take extra care on the roads, issuing a yellow “be aware” alert for wind from midnight to midday on Monday.

“The public should be aware of the potential for travel disruption from the strong winds as well as standing water on the roads and reduced visibility from spray and driving rain,” said the Met Office.

A warning for rain has also been issued for Northern Ireland, where up to 50mm (2in) could fall on higher ground.

The bad forecasts come after an exceptionally warm and dry September.

Hello listeners. We would like to hear your views on the smoking ban in public places. Is it legal? Share your views with us.

- Hello, this is Jan from York. In my opinion smoking should be banned at every area where any other living thing can be harmed. Smoking has no benefit and carries a very long list of hazards for smokers as well as others. Smoking is simply a waste of health and money.
- This is George. I disagree. The right to choose is a basic human right. If I want to smoke in a public place, then I have the right to do so. It is a basic human right. There is virtually no evidence that smoking in an open-air place will cause non-smokers harm from second-hand smoke.
- My name is Sara and I think that smoking bans in public places are legal because smoking affects the health of non-smokers. Non-smokers breathe in smoke from other people smoking, causing secondary smoking. Second hand smoke has been proven to have increased the number of ear infections as well as other illnesses in children.
- And our final listener, Peter. What's your view on that?
- In our society, we protect its members by enforcing laws to keep others from either intentionally, or inadvertently, harming those members. Private places for smoking allow those that choose to ingest nicotine to do so, without harming those who do not.
- Thank you all for taking part. Have a good afternoon.
